

In this example, we're going to use just a single feature in the corresponding target value for each training sample. When working with any kind of a data set, it's always a good idea to visualize it. And our goal here is to model the data with a straight line, which is defined by a Y intercept and a slope indicated as M .